From Event Execution to Enterprise Revenue Leadership

I'm a revenue-focused account manager with 5+ years of experience owning full-cycle B2B sales — from enterprise client acquisition through renewal and upsell. What started as event project management evolved into running a ₹23Cr+ pipeline, managing 40–60 concurrent high-value accounts, closing India's first international destination wedding deal, and building the sales org that sustained it all.

Managed 40–60 simultaneous enterprise accounts at peak

Consistent overachiever — never missed quota in any quarter

B2B clients: Collins Aerospace, Scania, Tokai Rika, Educational Initiatives

Built the sales team from ground up (20+ strategic hires)

What enterprise account management looked like

Full lifecycle ownership: acquisition → onboarding → delivery → renewal

Quarterly business reviews with C-suite and senior stakeholders

Proactive escalation resolution, zero churn on key accounts

Custom deal structuring for complex, multi-vendor engagements

Cross-functional coordination across ops, design & vendor teams

Post-sale experience management driving referral and repeat business

Operating in a WedTech Startup — Not Just Sales, but Systems

Meragi is a technology-first wedding platform — a startup where the CRM wasn't just a lead tracker. It was the entire operating system. I used it across the full client lifecycle.

Pre-Sale & Lead Mgmt	Active Account Ops	Post-Booking & Retention
- Lead capture & qualification workflows - Pipeline stage tracking & deal velocity - Automated follow-up sequences - Lead scoring & priority routing - Conversion rate monitoring by source	- Catalog & package configuration in CRM - Vendor coordination tracked per deal - Milestone-based task management - Document & contract storage - Custom client-specific workflow builds	- Post-booking update automation to clients - Delivery milestone notifications - Review & NPS collection flows - Renewal and upsell triggers - Churn signal monitoring & escalation alerts
Startup context: No playbooks. Built processes, sales frameworks, and CRM workflows from scratch while hitting targets — the definition of a self-starter in a high-ambiguity environment.

Thriving in a High-Growth, High-Ambiguity WebTech Startup

No sales playbook

Challenge: Meragi was scaling fast with no documented sales process.

Solution: Built consultative sales frameworks from scratch; codified them into repeatable team workflows.

CRM used as catalogue

Challenge: Product catalogue, vendor mapping, and post-booking comms were all manual.

Solution: Drove CRM adoption beyond leads — used it for catalogue config, delivery tracking, and client notifications.

Scaling a team mid-growth

Challenge: Revenue targets doubled while the org was still being built.

Solution: Ran 60+ interviews, made 20+ strategic hires, onboarded and mentored the full team — while hitting targets.

High-volume + high-touch

Challenge: 40–60 concurrent accounts, each requiring personal attention.

Solution: Designed account tiers and prioritisation frameworks to ensure no account felt like a number.

Performance That's Never Gone Unnoticed

Across 5+ years, consistently over-achieved targets, maintained one of the lowest team attrition rates in the company, and earned recognition at every stage of the career ladder.

Let's Build Revenue Together.

I'm looking for a Strategic Account Manager or Enterprise Sales role at a B2B SaaS or technology company where I can own a high-value portfolio, build long-term client relationships, and consistently overachieve targets.

My background is unconventional for tech — but the fundamentals are identical: pipeline ownership, consultative selling, multi-stakeholder management, and a relentless focus on revenue and retention.
